FEUD ENDS IN MURDER

James Cleary Shot and Killed by Police Officer Cash.

Result of a Midnight Election Row in Williamsbridge.

WILLIAMSBRIDGE, N. Y., May 27.-James Cleary, a prominent politician, died at 5 lodgers and behaving in a very wild manner.

of the police of this place. Cash is locked up in the White Plains jail.

The shooting was the outcome of political jealousy, which had gradually developed into a strong antipathy, and ultimately into a strong antipathy, and ultimately into a strong antipathy, and ultimately into a strong antipathy.

The fathers of officers Cash and of Cleary had been Street Commissioners, and a bitter rivalry sprung up between them which culminated in the murder of Cleary on the occasion of a special election held in the village last night. The question of raising $50,000 for improving roads was submitted to the voters and the proposition was carried.

During the progress of the election Officer Cash and Cleary were very prominent at the polls, working hard among the voters to se-

In consequence they met frequently and quarrels that portended blows, but no one imagined for a moment that anything more serious would result.

Officer Cash was in full uniform at the time and on duty. Although bloodshed was not anticipated the friends of both Cash and Cleary strove to keep them apart and prevent a row. In this they were successful until shortly met, on the White Plains road, near Mc-Turk's store, and entered into a controversy over the election just terminated.

Cleary retorted hotly and Cash drew his revolver and fired point blank at his opponent before Lawyer Hunt could interfere. Without a word Cleary fell to the ground with a bullet in his lett temple.

The shot was heard by Deputy Sheriff Delahanty, who was near by, and promptly placed Cash under arrest.

Rushing to Cleary's side, Lawyer Hunt discovered raint signs of lite, and with the aid of other villagers who came running up, carried the wounded man into the hotel not far away, where his family and a physician were immediately summones.

Medical and proved unavailing, however, and after lingering until 5 o'clock this morning cleary died without recognizing any of his relatives.

Meanwhile Cash was taken to the village Coroner Frederick Drews was summoned from Mount Vernon. He took charge of the body this morning and proceeded to the body this morning and proceeded to impanel a jury.

At the direction of the Coroner, Cash was taken, still in full uniform, to the county jail at White Plains, where he was locked up on a charge of murder.

Before leaving he said to the Coroner that the reason he shot Cleary was that the latter had insuited him. Then he added bonstrully; "I am a good shot. I have been practising at shooting bottles for weeks past."

Cash then surrendered his pistol to Coroner Drows.

Cash thou surfements to the Coroner is regarded here as an indication that he was preparing himself for any possible trouble at last night's election, and that he intended to be ready for minsoir for any possible trouble at last night's election, and that he intended to be ready for any emergency.

Fricads of Cleary insist that the remark will go far towards proving that Cash's shooting of Cleary was premeditated.

The real cause of the emocunter was said this morning to have been a dosire on the part of the fathers of each to secure the contracts for the work of improving the high-pays authorized by last night's election.

According to one version Cash had been drinking when he met Cleary and accused him of trying to prevent the elder Cash from securing the highway improvement contract. Hot words ensued, and Cash is said to have remarked, just as he shot Cleary:

"You attend to your business and Ill attend to mine."

The shooting has created the most intense excitement throughout all this part of the county. Both the Cash and Cleary families are widely known and have been prominent in politics for years.

are widely known and have been prominent in politics for years.

Cleary was a man of reputed excellent habits and did not drink.

A resident of Williamsbridge gives another version of the shooting. He says that during the election, James Cleary father, Patrick Cleary, got into an altercation with Police Officer Patrick Cash about 11.30 o'clock. The trouble arose over the political differences between the two families.

According to this informant, Cash was drunk at the time. Finding he was getting the worst of the argument with Patrick Cleary, Cash remembered that he was Chief of Police, in uniform and on duty, and undertook to arrest patrick Cleary.

There appears to have been no just ground for the arrest. James Cleary.

Patrick Cleary.

There appears to have been no just ground for the arrest. James Cleary, the son of Patrick, remonstrated with Cash, telling him he could not arrest his father, who had not committed any breach of the peace.

Cash proceeded to drag Patrick Cleary away to the lock-up, and James Cleary undertook to prevent him. A fight then ensued, and Cash drew his revolver and deliberately shot James Cleary in the head.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May T.—
Police Officer Cash was seen in the White Plains Jail this morning by a reporter. His face was cut and bloody. His uniform was dusty, and showed signs of a struggle, and he presented the appearance of a man who had been drinking heavily. Aside from the bruises his face was swollen.
Cash's cut and bloody face bears out the assertion that he got into an altercation with James Cleary regarding the arrest of Cleary's father, and that during the fight he received the cuts and bruises upon his face.
